Counselor's Corner

Having a growth mindset means believing intelligence and talent can be developed with practice and effort. It is the foundation for overcoming adversity and learning through struggles. One of the best ways to teach a growth mindset to our children is to model this through our own words and actions. Big Life Journal is a company devoted to supporting positive growth and development in children. This link will take you to a list of hundreds of media resources (books, videos, movies, songs, TV shows, games, apps, etc.) put together by Big Life Journal. <https://biglife.attn.tv/l/4fb/cHhvv>

Each of the resources on this list portrays an example of resilience and perseverance, which are crucial components to overcoming the challenges of our imperfect world. Looking for something to watch for 'family movie night?' Need a motivating song that is also kid-friendly? Would a story book example of perseverance be helpful? You can find all of these and more on the list at the previous hyperlink. For additional resources from Big Life Journal, check out their website at biglifejournal.com.
